

Re: Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act

I am writing this comment to express my disagreement with any plans to force VoIP providers to leave "back doors" for eavesdropping.

The advent of freely available strong encryption and the flexibility of the Internet create a number of options for secure communications. Denying the VoIP providers the ability to provide secure communications will only marginalize their business prospects.